JESSIE LUMPKINS SELECTED AS A 2018 NATIONAL TEACH AG CHAMPION

DES MOINES – As part of the annual National Teach Ag Day celebration, the National Teach Ag Campaign recognizes individuals who play an important role in agricultural education as Teach Ag Champions. These individuals encourage others to pursue a career in teaching agriculture and celebrate the important role agriculture teachers play in the lives of their students – all in an effort to address the national demand for agriculture teachers. The 2018 Teach Ag Champions were also selected based upon their passion and dedication to transforming agricultural education into a more inclusive and diverse profession while cultivating the next generation of agriculture teachers. This year, Ms. Jessie Lumpkins, agriculture teacher at McGavock High School, in Nashville, Tennessee, was named one of the four 2018 National Teach Ag Champions.

Jessie Lumpkins was selected as a Teach Ag Champion for her use of social media to showcase her career as an agriculture teacher and share her passion for agricultural education. Lumpkins has been featured as a panelist during Teach Ag workshops and previous National Teach Ag Day live webcasts. As a member of the Tennessee State Teach Ag Results (STAR) team, she works to address the demand for agriculture teachers at the state level by encouraging high school and college students to major in agricultural education.

Lumpkins was recognized for her outstanding accomplishments during the National Teach Ag Day live celebration on Thursday, September 20th, at the Corteva Agriscience Agriculture Division of DowDuPont headquarters, in Johnston, Iowa.

The National Teach Ag Campaign is a project of the National Council for Agricultural Education, led by the National Association of Agricultural Educators. Funding for the National Teach Ag Campaign is provided by the CHS Foundation, Corteva Agriscience™ Agriculture Division of DowDuPont™, BASF, Herman & Bobbie Wilson, and Growth Energy, as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. The campaign is designed to raise awareness of the need to recruit and retain high quality and diverse agriculture teachers, encourage others to consider a career teaching agriculture, and celebrate the positive contributions that agriculture teachers make in our schools and communities. For more information about the National Teach Ag Campaign, visit www.naae.org/teachag.
