Alycia McLamb Selected to Represent Agricultural Education at 2012 National Teach Ag Day Virtual Celebration

Alycia McLamb, agricultural education junior at North Carolina State University, has been selected to represent the National Teach Ag Campaign at the upcoming 2012 National Teach Ag Day Virtual Celebration in Buena Park, Calif. McLamb will be a panelist at the event, answering questions about majoring in agricultural education from people viewing the event live online.

McLamb is currently serving as a National Teach Ag Ambassador, one of ten agricultural education majors from across the United States who represent the best and brightest future agriculture teachers. These students promote the profession of agricultural education at a variety of events throughout their year of service.

National Teach Ag Day is a component of the National Teach Ag Campaign, an effort to bring attention to the need for more agricultural educators in the U.S and celebrate the contributions that agriculture teachers make in their schools and communities. The Teach Ag Day virtual celebration will take place on Thursday, March 15 from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m. PST. For details about the celebration, visit www.naae.org/teachag/live2012.php.

The Teach Ag Campaign is an initiative of the National Council for Agricultural Education, led by the National Association of Agricultural Educators. The campaign is funded by the CHS Foundation and Landmark Nurseries as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.
